Harry Thacker Burleigh is arguably one of the most important American classical musicians of the early 20th century, and yet few music lovers today know his name, much less his music. The reason, of course, is that he was a Black American, in an era where Black Americans were not welcome in many schools, businesses and neighborhoods, let alone the pristine corridors of America’s concert halls. The grandson of slaves, Burleigh learned African American spirituals and plantation songs from his grandfather as a child, and carried those melodies with him when he was accepted into the prestigious National Conservatory of Music in New York at the age of 26. To support himself during his studies, he worked as a handyman and did janitorial work at the Conservatory, frequently singing spirituals while mopping the hallways. It was his outstanding baritone voice, and the unique character of the spirituals, that reportedly drew the attention of the Conservatory’s director, none other than Antonín Dvořák.

The Czech composer was fascinated by the uniquely American music, and asked Burleigh to sing more for him. Burleigh said: “I sang our Negro songs for him very often, and before he wrote his own themes, he filled himself with the spirit of the old Spirituals.” Dvořák, who had gained fame in Europe for utilizing Czech folk idioms in his music, had been tasked with helping America create a new, uniquely American music. He found in Burleigh’s songs the basis for what he saw as the American sound, and would eventually conclude that the music of Black and Native Americans should serve as the foundation of a new “American classical music.” Indeed, the most famous melodies in Dvořák’s beloved “New World Symphony” were inspired directly by the scales and rhythms of the songs Burleigh sang for him. Burleigh would go on to enjoy an extraordinary career as a singer, composer and arranger, serving as a soloist for St. George’s Episcopal Church in New York, where he would sing for 52 years, as well as New York’s Temple Emanu-El where he performed for 25 years. He began publishing arrangements of art songs in the 1890s, and began composing his own original works shortly thereafter. By the late 1910s, Burleigh was one of America’s best-known composers of art song. He would go on to write more than 200 works, and almost single handedly bring the sounds of Black American music to the wider classical music-loving public. Although the vast majority of his output was vocal music, Burleigh did compose some music for violin and piano, including the “Southland Sketches”, written in 1916. The four exquisitely crafted movements create a charming homage to the music of Black American life in the late 19th/early 20th century. Sketch No. 1 opens with a gentle introduction in the piano, ushering in a simple song from the muted violin containing syncopated rhythms commonly found in spirituals. It rises in intensity only briefly before concluding with a tender sweep upward. The second movement is a bluesy song, full of sensual slides and jazzy harmonies that would find their way into Gershwin’s music in the following decade. The third sketch is an exquisite original American folk song. The charming opening music contains a short reference to Stephen Foster’s 1851 “Old Folks at Home” (Swanee River) before a central section in a minor key emerges. This darker music has a decidedly sad feel, and utilizes frequent double stops in the violin part. The final movement is the most animated, opening with a perky theme that has a Vaudevillian energy. A slightly slower middle section diverts into a more melancholy feel before the opening “show tune” returns, rushing to an energetic conclusion designed to elicit smiles.

Harry Burleigh’s extraordinary voice and musical talent won over even those most suspicious of allowing a Black musician into their midst. He was by all accounts a beloved and highly respected performer and composer who was a founder, and later member of the board of directors of ASCAP, the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers. To hear his music today is like opening a time capsule and being transported back to the birth of a new style of music that was unlike anything that had come before. A new music, rooted not in the western European traditions of Beethoven and Brahms, but rather in the experiences of enslaved people – with a power, and sadness, and beauty, that made it uniquely American.

JOHANNES BRAHMS

(Born May 7, 1833, Hamburg, Germany; died April 3, 1897, Vienna, Austria)

Piano Quartet no. 3 in C minor, op. 60

Composed: 1875

Published: 1875

First performance: In its final incarnation, November 18, 1875, Vienna, by members of the Hellmesberger Quartet with the composer at the piano

Other works from this period: Symphony no. 1, op. 68 (1862–1876); String Quartet in C minor, op. 51, no. 1 (1873); String Quartet in B-flat major, op. 67 (1875); Violin Sonata no. 1 in G major, op. 78 (1878–1879); Klavierstücke, op. 76 (1879)

Johannes Brahms completed the last of his three piano quartets, the Quartet in C minor, op. 60, in 1875, but he had begun work on the piece some two decades prior, during a period of intense personal anguish. In 1853, the twenty-year-old Brahms, on the advice of the violinist Joseph Joachim, traveled to Düsseldorf, Germany, to play for Western music's reigning power couple, the composer Robert Schumann and composer and pianist Clara Schumann. Robert Schumann, also a prolific music critic, published an account of their first meeting:

“There inevitably must appear a musician called to give expression to his times in ideal fashion; a musician who would reveal his mastery not in a gradual evolution, but like Athena would spring fully armed from Zeus’s head. And such a one has appeared; a young man over whose cradle Graces and Heroes have stood watch. His name is Johannes Brahms...Even outwardly he bore the marks proclaiming: “This is a chosen one.” Sitting at the piano he began to disclose wonderful regions to us. We were drawn into even more enchanting spheres. Besides, he is a player of genius who can make of the piano an orchestra of lamenting and loudly jubilant voices. There were sonatas, veiled symphonies rather; songs the poetry of which would be understood even without words...Should he direct his magic wand where the powers of the masses in chorus and orchestra may lend him their forces, we can look forward to even more wondrous glimpses of the secret world of spirits.”

Brahms quickly got on well with the Schumanns and stayed in their home for the next two weeks, developing deep and consequential personal ties. The following year, Robert Schumann, who for years had been battling significant mental illness, attempted suicide. He survived and committed himself to an asylum near Bonn, Germany, for fear of harming his family; Clara Schumann was forbidden to visit for the following two and half years and did not see her husband again until the final two days of his life in 1856.

During this time, Brahms lived in the Schumanns’ home, helping to care for Robert and Clara’s children and assisting with domestic affairs. He moreover fell deeply in love with Clara Schumann, fourteen years his senior—an affection that was reciprocated, if complicatedly so. Clara Schumann later shared the following with her children:

“He came as a true friend, to share with me all my sorrow; he strengthened my heart as it was about to break, he lifted my thoughts, lightened, when it was possible, my spirits. In short, he was my friend in the fullest sense of the word. I can truly say, my children, that I have never loved a friend as I loved him; it is the most beautiful mutual understanding of two souls. I do not love him for his youthfulness, nor probably for any reason of flattered vanity. It is rather his elasticity of spirit, his fine gifted nature, his noble heart that I love...Believe all that I, your mother, have told you, and do not heed those small and envious souls who make light of my love and friendship, trying to bring up for question our beautiful relationship, which they neither fully understand nor ever could.”

In 1859, with the Adagio of his First Piano Concerto, Brahms wrote to Clara Schumann that he had created a “gentle portrait” of her. If that sublime movement serves as an expression of ecstatic love, the depth of Brahms’s angst finds voice in the Opus 60 Piano Quartet.

When sending the quartet to his publisher, Brahms wrote, “You may place a picture on the title page, namely a head—with a pistol in front of it. This will give you some idea of the music. I shall send you a photograph of myself for the purpose. Blue coat, yellow breeches, and top-boots would do well, as you seem to like color printing.” A nineteenth-century reader would immediately have understood this reference to The Sorrows of Young Werther, Johann Wolfgang von Goethe’s classic story of unrequited love, in which the protagonist is hopelessly in love with a woman engaged to another man. Unable to bear being without her, he shoots himself.

The character of the quartet’s opening measures immediately sets a grave tone. Brahms is less than subtle about his expressive motivations; embedded in this disconsolate opening melody is a cipher that Robert Schumann periodically used to spell Clara’s name: C–B-flat–A–G-sharp–A (replacing the letters l and r, which don’t have equivalent musical pitches, with B-flat and G-sharp).

This cipher appears in various works by Robert Schumann, including his song “Die Lotosblume,” from the song cycle Myrthen, op. 25, composed as a wedding gift to Clara. In the Opus 60 Piano Quartet, Brahms turns Robert Schumann’s loving Clara theme (transposed here to wretched C minor) into an expression of deep Romantic Sturm und Drang.

The quartet comprises four movements. Following the Scherzo comes the work’s emotional centerpiece: a lovely Andante, whose opening cello solo one biographer has surmised to be Brahms’s farewell to Clara—a reluctant acceptance that their love is never to be fulfilled.

The work's Allegro finale is at once understated yet brimming with nervous energy. The attentive ear will detect an insistent rhythmic figure underpinning the sinewy melodic lines in the strings. As with Brahms's allusion to Werther, this rhythmic motif would have been immediately familiar to nineteenth-century listeners as a nod to Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. What Beethoven deployed as shorthand for the unfeeling cruelty of fate, Brahms uses to express his quiet despair.

Antonín Dvořák's Piano Quintet in A major, op. 81—celebrated along with the quintets of Robert Schumann and Johannes Brahms as one of the genre's essential works—actually represents the Czech composer's second such work. The first, also in A major, was completed in 1872, but Dvořák was not satisfied with it and destroyed the score. The piano quintet that survives began as an attempted revision of the earlier work, before evolving into a wholly new piece. Over a century later, it remains one of Dvořák's signature chamber works.

The opening Allegro, ma non tanto begins with a wistful melody in the cello, played over a light piano accompaniment. Still dwelling on the same theme, the mood quickly turns somber, then suddenly violent. Dvořák uses the same musical idea to create passages that are in turns tender and forceful. After further transfiguration of this first theme, a rustic, dance-like second theme emerges in the viola.

The quintet's second movement is a dumka, a folk genre whose origins as a sung lament are audible in Dvořák's plaintive lyricism. Himself an avid violist, Dvořák assigns the opening espressivo melody to that instrument's dusky low register. This bittersweet theme recurs in alternation with music of a sunnier disposition introduced by the first violin.

Dvořák designates the Scherzo movement a “furiant,” a fast Czech dance form. (The term literally describes the swagger of a conceited man.) The movement begins with a quick, rollicking theme, which carries the music into a broad, sweeping melody in the viola. The central trio section presents a tranquil contrast to the Scherzo, using the same melody but with a dramatically new inflection. The trio's serenity flows seamlessly back into the jaunty music of the Scherzo.

The quintet concludes with an Allegro of boundless energy. Though centering primarily on the peasant dance theme that begins the movement, the Finale offers a generous series of beguiling melodic ideas, including a tightly wrought fugato passage. Exuberant throughout, the music slows to a hymnlike chorale near the movement's end before blazing its way to a brilliant finish.

ARTISTS

Pianist Wu Han, recipient of Musical America's Musician of the Year Award, enjoys a multi-faceted musical life that encompasses artistic direction, performing, and recording at the highest levels. Co-Artistic Director of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center since 2004 as well as Founder and Co-Artistic Director of Silicon Valley's innovative chamber music festival Music@Menlo since 2002, she also serves as Artistic Advisor for Wolf Trap's Chamber Music at the Barns series and Palm Beach's Society of the Four Arts, and as Artistic Director for La Musica in Sarasota, Florida. Her recent concert activities have taken her from New York's Lincoln Center stages to the most important concert halls in the United States, Europe, and Asia. In addition to countless performances of virtually the entire chamber repertoire, her concerto performances include appearances with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Atlanta Symphony, and the Aspen Festival Orchestra. She is the Founder and Artistic Director of ArtistLed, classical music's first artist-directed, internet-based recording label, which has released her performances of the staples of the cello-piano duo repertoire with cellist David Finckel. Her more than 80 releases on ArtistLed, CMS Live, and Music@Menlo LIVE include masterworks of the chamber repertoire with numerous distinguished musicians. Wu Han's educational activities include overseeing CMS's Bowers Program and the Chamber Music Institute at Music@Menlo. A recipient of the prestigious Andrew Wolf Award, she was mentored by some of the greatest pianists of our time, including Lilian Kallir, Rudolf Serkin, and Menahem Pressler. Married to cellist David Finckel since 1985, Wu Han divides her time between concert touring and residences in New York City and Westchester County.

A recipient of the 2015 Avery Fisher Career Grant, as well as a top prizewinner of the 2012 Walter W. Naumburg Competition and the Astral Artists' 2010 National Auditions,

Kristin Lee is a violinist of remarkable versatility and impeccable technique who enjoys a vibrant career as a soloist, recitalist, chamber musician, and educator. She is the co-founder and artistic director of Emerald City Music in Seattle and was recently appointed to the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music faculty as Assistant Professor of Violin. Lee has appeared as soloist with leading orchestras including The Philadelphia Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony, St. Paul Chamber Orchestra, New Jersey Symphony, Hawai'i Symphony, Hong Kong Philharmonic, Ural Philharmonic of Russia, Korean Broadcasting Symphony, Guiyang Symphony Orchestra of China, and Orquesta Sinfonica Nacional of Dominican Republic. She has performed on the world's finest concert stages, including Carnegie Hall, David Geffen Hall, the Kennedy Center, the Kimmel Center, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Ravinia Festival, the Louvre Museum, the Phillips Collection, and Korea's Kumho Art Gallery. An accomplished chamber musician, she is a member of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. Born in Seoul, she began studying violin at age five and within one year won First Prize at the Korea Times Violin Competition. In 1995, she moved to the US to continue her studies under Sonja Foster and in 1997 entered The Juilliard School's Pre-College. In 2000, Lee was chosen to study with Itzhak Perlman. Lee holds a Master's degree from The Juilliard School.

Co-Artistic Director of CMS since 2004, cellist David Finckel's dynamic musical career has included performances on the world's stages in the roles of recitalist, chamber artist, and orchestral soloist. The first American student of Mstislav Rostropovich, he joined the Emerson String Quartet in 1979, and during 34 seasons garnered nine Grammy Awards and the Avery Fisher Prize. His quartet performances and recordings include quartet cycles of Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Dvorák, Brahms, Bartók, and Shostakovich, as well as collaborative masterpieces and commissioned works. In 1997, he and pianist Wu Han founded ArtistLed, the first internet-based, artist-controlled classical recording label. ArtistLed's catalog of more than 20 releases includes the standard literature for cello and piano, plus works composed for the duo by George Tsontakis, Gabriela Lena Frank, Bruce Adolphe, Lera Auerbach, Edwin Finckel, Augusta Read Thomas, and Pierre Jalbert. In 2022, Music@Menlo, an innovative summer chamber music festival in Silicon Valley founded and directed by David and Wu Han, celebrated its 20th season. As a young student, David was winner of the Philadelphia Orchestra's junior and senior divisions, resulting in two performances with the orchestra. Having taught extensively with the late Isaac Stern in America, Israel, and Japan, he is currently a professor at both the Juilliard School and Stony Brook University, and oversees both CMS's Bowers Program and Music@Menlo's Chamber Music Institute. David's 100 online Cello Talks, lessons on cello technique, are viewed by an international audience of musicians. Along with Wu Han, he was the recipient of Musical America's 2012 Musicians of the Year Award.

Violinist James Thompson enjoys a multifaceted career as a chamber musician, soloist, educator and lecturer. He is currently on faculty at Music@Menlo and has been a member of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center's Bowers Program since 2021. Thompson was raised in Cleveland, Ohio and studied at the Cleveland Institute of Music, where he was introduced to the world of chamber music. He has since performed with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, Music@Menlo, the Four Arts Society, the Perlman Music Program and has appeared in solo engagements with The Cleveland Orchestra among others. Recently Thompson's abilities as a presenter have earned him invitations to speak at a variety of established concert series. As newly-appointed director of Music@Menlo's Winter Residency, he curates diverse student and community programs. Additionally, Thompson has a strong reputation as a private instructor and chamber music coach. He views his work with young people as an immensely important aspect of his calling as a musician.

Thompson holds a Bachelor of Music, Masters and Artist Diploma degrees from the Cleveland Institute of Music; his primary teachers include Jaime Laredo, William Preucil and Paul Kantor. He currently resides in Rochester, N.Y. with his wife, violinist Jeanelle Thompson.

Praised by Strad magazine as having "lyricism that stood out...a silky tone and beautiful, supple lines," violist Milena Pajaro-van de Stadt has established herself as one of the most sought-after violists of her generation. In addition to appearances as soloist with the Tokyo Philharmonic, the Jacksonville Symphony, and the Sphinx Chamber Orchestra, she has performed in recitals and chamber-music concerts throughout the United States, Latin America, Europe and Asia, including an acclaimed 2011 debut recital at London's Wigmore Hall, which was described in Strad as being "fleet and energetic...powerful and focused." Ms. Pajaro-van de Stadt was the founding violist of the Dover Quartet, and played in the group from 2008-2022. During her time in the group, the Dover Quartet was the First Prize-winner and recipient of every special award at the Banff International String Quartet Competition 2013, and winner of the Gold Medal and Grand Prize in the 2010 Fischhoff Chamber Music Competition. Her numerous awards also include First Prize of the Lionel Tertis International Viola Competition and top prizes at the the Sphinx Competition and the Tokyo International Viola Competition.

While in the Dover Quartet, Ms. Pajaro-van de Stadt was on the faculty at The Curtis Institute of Music and Northwestern University's Bienen School of Music, and a part of the Quartet in Residence of the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. A violin student of Sergiu Schwartz and Melissa Pierson-Barrett for several years, she began studying viola with Michael Klotz at the Bowdoin International Music Festival in 2005. Ms. Pajaro-van de Stadt graduated from the Curtis Institute of Music, where she studied with Roberto Diaz, Michael Tree, Misha Amory, and Joseph de Pasquale. She then received her Master's Degree in String Quartet with the Dover Quartet at Rice University's Shepherd School of Music, as a student of James Dunham.

American violist Matthew Lipman has been praised by the New York Times for his “rich tone and elegant phrasing.” He has appeared with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Chamber Orchestra of Europe, Minnesota Orchestra, BBC Philharmonic, Academy of St Martin in the Fields, and the Juilliard Orchestra, and has been a featured soloist at the Aspen Music Festival, Carnegie Hall, New World Symphony, Wigmore Hall, and Walt Disney Concert Hall. The Strad praised his “most impressive” 2019 Cedille Records debut album Ascent, which included world premiere recordings of Shostakovich and Clarice Assad, and his recording of Mozart’s Sinfonia concertante with violinist Rachel Barton Pine and Sir Neville Marriner on the Avie label topped the Billboard Classical Charts. A former artist-in-residence for the American Viola Society, he was featured on WFMT Chicago’s list “30 Under 30” of the world’s top classical musicians. Additionally, he has appeared on PBS, Now Hear This, and Live from Lincoln Center. An alum of CMS’s Bowers Program, he performs regularly at the Marlboro, Music@Menlo, Ravinia, and Rheingau festivals. He was the recipient of an Avery Fisher Career Grant and a major prize winner in the Primrose, Tertis, Washington, Johansen, and Stulberg International Competitions, and he studied at the Juilliard School with Heidi Castleman and at the Kronberg Academy with Tabea Zimmermann. Lipman is on faculty at Stony Brook University and performs on a 1700 Matteo Goffriller viola on generous loan from the Rachel Barton Pine Foundation. He holds the Susan S. and Kenneth L. Wallach Chair at CMS

Recipient of the prestigious 2015 Avery Fisher Career Grant and the 2017 Lincoln Center Award for Emerging Artists, Paul Huang is considered to be one of the most distinctive artists of his generation, known for his big, luscious tone and spot-on intonation. The Washington Post proclaimed him as “an artist with the goods for a significant career.”

Recent highlights include his acclaimed debut at Bravo! Vail Music Festival stepping in for violinist Anne-Sophie Mutter performing Mozart’s Violin Concerto No. 4. Paul also became the first classical violinist to perform his own arrangement of the national anthem for the opening games of the NFL at the Bank of America Stadium in Charlotte, N.C. Paul Huang plays with a variety of orchestras including the National Symphony Orchestra of Taiwan, the Rotterdam Philharmonic as well as the Buffalo Philharmonic, and the Colorado and San Diego Symphonies. His 2023 season recital and chamber music performances will include his debut recital at Alice Tully Hall with pianist Anne-Marie McDermott as well as Wolf Trap, the Society of Four Arts in Palm Beach and Chamber Music San Francisco.

Born in Taiwan, Huang began violin lessons at the age of seven. He is a recipient of the inaugural Kovner Fellowship at The Juilliard School, where he earned his Bachelor’s and Master’s degrees under Hyo Kong and I-Hao Lee. He plays on the legendary 1742 “ex-Wieniawski” Guarneri del Gesù on extended loan through the Stradivari Society of Chicago and is on the faculty of the Taipei National University of the Arts. He resides in New York.

American violinist Chad Hoopes is a consistent and versatile performer with the world's leading orchestras, including the Philadelphia Orchestra, l'Orchestre de Paris, l'Orchestre National du Capitole de Toulouse, the Konzerthausorchester Berlin, and the Minnesota and National Arts Centre orchestras, as well as the San Francisco, Pittsburgh, Houston, and National symphonies. An alum of CMS's Bowers Program, he performs regularly on tour and at Alice Tully Hall with the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. He has been a guest of the Moritzburg Festival, Rheingau Musik Festival, and the Aspen Music Festival, and has been featured on recordings including the recent Moritzburg Festival Dvorák album with cellist Jan Vogler, released by Sony Classical, and with the MDR Leipzig and conductor Kristjan Järvi performing the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto on the Naïve label. He has performed in recital at the Ravinia Festival, the Tonhalle Zürich, and the Louvre, as well as on Lincoln Center's Great Performers series. He is a 2017 recipient of Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Career Grant and appeared as the cover feature on the November 2021 edition of The Strad. Hoopes attended the Cleveland Institute of Music before studying with Ana Chumachenko at the Kronberg Academy. He plays the 1991 Samuel Zygmuntowicz, ex Isaac Stern violin.

Cellist Keith Robinson is a founding member of the Miami String Quartet and has been active as a chamber musician, recitalist, and soloist since his graduation from the Curtis Institute of Music. His most recent recording, released on Blue Griffin Records with pianist Donna Lee, features Mendelssohn's complete works for cello and piano. As a member of the Miami String Quartet, he has recorded for the BMG, CRI, Musical Heritage Society, and Pyramid recording labels, was a member of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center's CMS Two, and won the Concert Artists Guild, London String Quartet, and Fischhoff Chamber Music competitions. He plays a Carlo Tononi cello made in Venice and dated 1725.
